

Limelight Workspace

Our people want to be safe and secure wherever they work

General Infection Control

The average journey to work will bring us into contact with many surfaces before we reach the office, however we commute. This is why we require both short and long-term solutions to support a clean hands process before we enter the office space and while at work.

Foyers that encourage visitors and staff to clean their hands when entering the workspace will become standard.

Free-standing portable units are a short-term solution for hand and office cleaning stations. For the longer-term we see them becoming an integrated feature of your workspace.

Place wash stations in high-risk areas, such as canteen and kitchen areas. Utilise hallway space to integrate handwashing facilities, which also serves as a design feature that denotes the transition into a high-risk hygiene area. Keep antibacterial wipes near workstations to support clean down procedures, enabling users to wipe the desks and surfaces down before use.
